THOROUGHFARE GAP .- The immese Bull Run Mountain seems cleft in twain, as if by some mights power. The way is scarcely wide enough to admit of the passage of a wagon. To an immense hight, on each side, rise huge piles of limestone rocks, from whose crevices spring a thousand fountains, whose splashing upon the rocks beneath is echoed ten thousand times. Huge trees form an immense canopy in the hights, rising one above the other. The sun smiles but in few places in the dark passage. The bottom of the gap is filled with rocks and mud, and it seems scarcely possible to a novice in mountain wonders that either hores or vehicle could pass the tortuous, rough and dark labyrinth. But it was done this morning. The advance guard, led by Stahl and Wyndham, is tollowed with the rush of artillery and horsemen. The occasional reflection from the bright brass 12 pounders, and the tremendous rumbling of the wheels, tell that they are rapidly passing through the awful defile. The clatter of thousands of hoofs and the clanking of the subers echo with such force as to be painful to the ear. But onward press the gallant band; in a few moments the "old flag" emerges into the glowing sunlight, followed by a brave host of feilows, the echoes of whose shouts burst forth with a stupendous roar from the depths of the Gap. The passage is made rapidly and every ore breathes freer, as he thinks the usually cowardly enemy have not this time made the Gap a the many of them -- Cor. Philadel phia Inquirer.
